SATURDAY, JULY 12, 1873.

In the times of the Cherokee troubles in the South, Major John Seaborn, who may yet be living in his home in North Carolina, had an aboriginal adventure, which a citizen of Whitfield County, Ga., now recalls in the New Georgia Citizen for modern study. While a member of a surveying party, encamped on the banks of the Etowah River, in what is now the Seventh District of Bartow County, the major one day started to visit a missionary station situated near a large spring, about a mile and a half inland, armed with the hunting knife in his belt, and not even accompanied by the faithful dog usually attending his steps. The savages were very bold in their encroachments at that time, and the Carolinian had not followed the forest trail very far before he involuntarily ambushed a gigantic Cherokee, who was cautiously leading captive a pony upon which sat in pleading terror an English missionary's lovely daughter, whose too daring morning ride had brought her into the toils of this outlaw. Seaborn paused for a moment in his unsought concealment in the undergrowth to witness the girl's wild effort to make her pony break free from the iron grasp of the captor, and saw the latter raise his tomahawk in murderous menace, and then, with a shrill yell of companionship and defiance, sprang grandly to the very side of the rearing animal.

The beautiful captive had just fallen from the saddle, and, as the surprised Indian involuntarily retreated some steps away, the rescuer swiftly caught her in his arms, replaced her on the steed, and bade her ride for her life. She needed no second warning, but was off like the wind, and then the white and red knights confronted each other with looks meaning battle to the death. The Indian was a herculean chieftain known as Unakayaswah—the "white man killer"—and the major, although standing six feet in altitude himself, and proportionately muscular and brave, felt impelled to such skirmishing tactics as might draw his foe towards the camp on the river, and at the same time tempt him to discharge his deadly tomahawk. The moment the Cherokee detected this design in the other's measured backward strides he bounded forward, brandishing his weapon, and, when the strategist finally wheeled and broke into a dead run, sent the huge battle axe hurling through the air. Only by an adroit swerve did Seaborn elude the terrible missile, which, after grazing his hair, struck deep into a tree beyond; but now he was upon more even terms with his enemy, upon whom he turned instantly at bay.

So quickly did he make the movement that a terrific blow of his fist met his pursuer before the latter could check his advancing impetus, and sent him reeling backward several paces. Now began the fight in earnest. Thrusting forward and aiming his head like a battering ram, in the manner of athletics of his tribe, the savage came on again with a ringing whoop, his purpose being to throw his head between his adversary's legs, who thereupon would be dashed in somersault upon his own head. Major Seaborn was familiar with this trick, however, and so deftly swung himself aside that it was the headlong assailant who came to the earth, and that on all fours. Then he was down on the discomfited warrior like a wolf, wrenched his arms from their supporting position with agile strength, and in a second had him face downward on the ground like a hawk under an eagle.

Momentarily disengaging one hand, then to make a vain effort for the drawing of his hunting knife, which had been caught by the handle in his waist band, he gave the Cherokee opportunity to catch the other hand in his teeth and bite it to the bone. In his pain and wrath the white man repaid this wound with a shower of tremendous blows, but the episode had been a diversion in favor of Unakayaswah, who by a supreme heave and twist, managed to wrest himself from beneath his load and regain his feet. Terrific fisticuffs followed, but in these the scientific boxing proficiency of the Carolinian caused such a one-sided business that the sorely punished red giant, after failing to get in a single blow, rallied for a clinch. His object was to force the fighting in the direction of the tree in which stuck his tomahawk, and detecting this purpose, the major fought furiously to thwart it.

Once when the savage hurled himself with all his might upon his foe, the latter's feet caught in a trailing grape vine, and brought him down on his back in the fierce grapple. Both were up again as quickly as the opposing physical impulses in straining toward and forcing away from the critical tree, and then by a skilful trick of wrestling, Seaborn accomplished a fall in which he was uppermost. This time, too, even with a pair of red hands clutching his throat, he succeeded in drawing his knife. With a snarling "Wah!" the warrior met this movement by clasping him mightily around the body and crushing him frantically down upon himself; and it would then have been a question of whose lungs could longest endure the terrific pressure but for the sudden appearance of an ally for the white man. A yelp and rush sounded in the bushes, and the major's dog from camp leaped upon the scene and instantly fastened his keen teeth in the nearest shoulder of his master's enemy. Unakayasway lost his grip under this new attack, and was at the mercy of the hunting knife in the next moment. "Karnarla! karnarla!" Enough! enough! he cried; take off the dog. Brave white man kill not great chief. I surrender."

His conqueror bound him hand and foot with his buckskin suspenders, and was leisurely staunching the blood from his wounds when the missionary's daughter came dashing back from the station with two armed men for the rescue. "As they looked at the stalwart form and bloody visage of the savage," said the victor, in his account of it, "and at my own somewhat bruised and sanguinary appearance, and listened to my narrative of the desperate struggle, they gave vent to expressions in regard to my strength and prowess which brought the tinge of pride to my cheeks. As for the lovely girl whom it had been my enviable fortune to rescue, she honored me with a regard for which I would gladly have dared greater perils, and told of my deliverance of her with tears of gratitude streaming down her cheeks." In fine keeping with this romantic element of the affair was the marriage of the major and the lady some three months later.

WATER AS A PRESERVER OF BUTTER.—After being duly packed water-tight, the packages may be placed in good, cold water, such as is found in good wells and springs anywhere. Any such good well of water may be used for this purpose, only be sure the package is completely under water always; and if under water several feet deep it is no detriment, but probably an advantage. It is not necessary, but probably best, that the packages should not rest on the clean ground at the bottom of the well—not that any harm would happen to the butter, but the outside of the packages might be soiled and muddy. A deep tank, kept full of water from a flowing spring and continually flowing, may be the most desirable reservoir for keeping the butter in, if the tank is well covered and kept from freezing. No one need be surprised if butter stored in this way may be kept for years as good as when packed. Possibly lard and some other articles of food may be stored in this way.

TRANSATLANTIC AIR NAVIGATION.

The design of Wise, the balloonist, to cross the Atlantic, if attempted, will prove an undertaking of great value. The public, when first hearing this proposed trip, are liable to regard it as a mere advertising dodge, and are disposed to treat the whole thing with contempt. Already, some of the smaller of the newspaper press are giving utterance to unmanly criticisms, which, to the writers themselves, are of tremendous consequence because of their own production.

Now this habit of decrying every new thing is pure silliness. It is true that it is a habit of most venerable age, but we see no excuse why an old fool or an old habit is rendered any more respectable on account of age. It is the same habit that has thrown itself forward during all time, whenever anybody suggested a novel idea or a novel experiment. It confronted Galileo and Columbus, the suggestion of crossing the ocean by steam, and the project for a railway over the mountains to the Pacific. Even the astute Ben Butler was addicted to this habit, and, as is well known, the announcement of the capture of Fort Fisher was made at the precise moment when this legislator was concluding an elaborate demonstration that Fort Fisher could not be taken.

There is no reason known to science which would prevent the crossing of the Atlantic from the west to east in a balloon. Everything points to the conclusion that such a trip is practicable; and while this is the case, we yet lack a practical demonstration. Such a demonstration would be of vast value to the domain of knowledge.

The direction, strength and general character of the upper aerial currents of the Atlantic are as yet only matters of speculation. He who will definitely settle these speculative conclusions will confer as substantial a benefit upon science as has been conferred by the discovery of any other fact of great practical value.

The press of the country should sustain the attempt, and, in this case, it should also sustain the man. Wise is no charlatan. He has for so many years been identified with aeronautics that there can no suspicion attach to him of proposing this effort simply to obtain notoriety. He is pushing the matter in good faith, and, should he start and fail and never be heard of again, no sensible person could do otherwise than admire his courage. Nor would his failure to cross the Atlantic render it any less the duty of other aeronauts to attempt the solution of the same problem.

This is a progressive age, and the man who sneers at new enterprises, who is always denouncing novel suggestions as something "newfangled," does not succeed in stopping progress, but only succeeds in writing himself down an ass.

Should it be demonstrated that balloons can cross the ocean from west to east, this feat alone, even should a return through the air be impossible, would prove of great value in a commercial sense. Hence it is not only meteorology but commerce which has an interest in the solution of this aerial problem; and should Wise prove the man to afford the solution, he will be accorded a rank of the first order among explorers and discoverers.—Chicago Times.

Newport Daily News.

SATURDAY, JULY 12, 1873.

Our friends will confer a favor, by sending us facts of any matter of local interest which may come to their knowledge.

Correspondence concerning matters of public interest will be inserted, but we do not hold ourselves responsible for opinions expressed in such communications. All manuscript must be accompanied by the name and address of the writer.

The summer routes of the News are now carried. The paper is delivered north as far as Bliss road, and as far as Gibbs avenue and south as far as Webster street. The publishers will be pleased to serve all within the above limits.

THE WATER SUPPLY.

The water shed of "Green end" or Bailey's Brook is capable of yielding an average daily supply of 3,000,000 gallons of water.

A storage reservoir capable of holding 200,000,000 gallons would cover an area of 75 acres 10 feet deep.

This would supply the present population, allowing 60 gallons per day to each inhabitant, 250 days without rain.

So that there is no trouble about the abundance of supply close at hand. Various systems may be considered as to the means of introduction. But it is high time that action was taken in the matter and some plan adopted that would relieve Newport from its present embarrassment on the water question.

SCHOOL GOVERNMENT.

In the remarks of Mr. Fay at the banquet last evening were some remarks on the relations which exist between himself and his students which we would earnestly commend to the careful reading of all instructors, all school boards and all friends of education. Mr. Fay said that when he went to school the pupil was to the the teacher very much as a slave is to a master. Each hated and distrusted the other, each was ready to resist and deceive. But as a teacher, his intercourse with his pupils had ever been pleasant and like that between equals.

That Mr. Fay's course has been crowned with success for the last twenty years or more is a fact to which we need only to allude. But it is none the less a fact that even at the present day, not only many, but even a considerable majority of the teachers in our academies and colleges have the same feeling that Mr. Fay's teachers did, and act as much like those gentlemen of a past generation as circumstances and the "tempora mutantur" will allow.

It is to be regretted that no treatise on college law has even been written. It is one of the most curious things in modern civilization. It consists of a choice selection from the civil law, the common law, and the law ecclesiastical, patriarchal and military. That is, the faculties of most of our colleges have selected from these and other codes such principles and rules as will best assist them in punishing students. For instance, students are told that they should inform against each other when one is known to have run shot into the lack of a recitation room because it is the duty of every citizen to notify the police when he knows that a murder has been committed. But if a student himself falls back on the common law and refuses to criminate himself he is forthwith visited with the severest penalties. His very silence is construed against him, and silence is tantamount to the most complete confession. But no undergraduate is able to discuss college law as it should be discussed, and graduates pretty generally bury the hatchet, and so no college Blackstone has yet arisen. But it is certain that most professors regard students as a French prefect regards the inhabitants of the Faubourg St. Antoine: that is, as a class dangerous, untrustworthy and to be punished as often as opportunity affords.

Of course this feeling is at once appreciated by the students, who in return cordially hate their professors, and lose no chance to trick and overreach them. The manner in which justice(?) is administered in college does not favorably impress the observer. If a general disturbance has occurred, no effort is made to find the most guilty parties. If some one is caught it is enough; if several are caught it is an abundance. Those who are caught are punished, and if the captives have been hurt, he who was the most hurt is generally the most punished; just as some fathers always flog their boys the more they have been punished by the teacher, although in this there is some little show of justice. A few years ago the faculty of Amherst college suspended a sophomore as an "example," though the whole class stated over their signatures that he was no more to blame than any one else, and they individually demanded the same punishment that he received. Of course the class was not suspended. One scapegoat was enough to satisfy the wrath of the faculty. This reminds us that there is a professor in that same college who was and probably still is in the habit of prowling about the town at night disguised, seeking what wayward student he might capture. This professor who walked to and fro in the town always reminded us of that talented but unprincipled individual who on one occasion was asked certain leading questions by the Almighty. For further particulars see Job, first chapter. On one occasion this enterprising professor, who really ought to be on the State constabulary, cornered a vile reprobate, an enemy of society, who helped ring the college bell at midnight preceding class day. The professor had the student very much as Davy Crocket had the coon, except the gun. The professor waited till his patience gave out, and then he told the student that if he would give himself up it would be all right, or he would say nothing about it or something else the obvious meaning of which was that the student's case should not be reported to the faculty. The offer was accepted, and very promptly the next morning his case was laid before the faculty, who very promptly voted to expel him, and he was saved only by the most unlimited promises of good behavior on the part of the class. It is barely possible that the professor's deception didn't amount to absolute lying, but we don't believe it. And intelligent and pious college faculties endorse just such conduct on the part of their members, and teach their students that kind of moral philosophy.

Expulsion or long suspension always means disgrace among friends; generally the end of an educational course, and frequently a total change of a student's plans and hopes. It is a very serious punishment, and yet it is often inflicted for small offences and in a court where the prisoner must criminate himself, and when the same parties act as judge, jury and prosecuting attorney. The prisoner is not present, and can neither address the court in person nor by counsel.

Espionage is a peculiar weakness of teachers. In East Hampton, Mass., is a gentleman, who while a teacher in Williston Seminary, used to sneak about the halls listening at student's doors to discover if anything improper was going on. This gentleman previously taught in the Academy at Monson, Mass., but the principal didn't like him because he wouldn't watch the boys enough at night. The same amusement was popular with a lady who was a few years ago at the head of Mt. Holyoke Seminary.

But there are other professors, just a few. One of them is among the most distinguished Greek scholars of the country. No professor can be a more rigid disciplinarian than this gentleman who is now connected with a western university. But he is known to be honest, impartial, and inflexible. The students have to work harder for him than for any other instructor. Carelessness or neglect he punishes swiftly and finally. But every one of his students respects him. They never attempt to overreach or deceive him. He is always approachable by students on any subject and talks as fairly as he acts.

The justice of his decisions is never questioned even by his victims. He never watches or commands or drives his students, but treats them as gentlemen and companions and they work well for him. In speaking of the relation of professors and students he once said that for his part he believed students were on the whole, as trustworthy, as faithful, and as much in earnest as are professors. We congratulate our city on having had for a score of years, and on still having as one of its citizens a gentleman who can treat his pupils as gentlemen.

The Sunfish.

The London Telegraph of June 6th tells a curious story of the perils of deep sea angling in Irish waters, in which fish fishermen lost their lives in pursuit of a sunfish.

"The sunfish, though occasionally caught with a hook and bait, is generally speared or harpooned like the whale. It derives its name from being usually seen in fine weather from long distances shining on the surface of the sea, and basking as it were in the heat. The oil from one of these creatures is said to be worth £20 ($100) and it is no wonder that the prospects of such a prize tempted the fishermen of Shark Island, on the Irish coast, to make an effort for its capture. A short time ago a crew started off in pursuit of this valuable quarry. They succeeded in spearing the fish, which, from its strength and weight, they were then obliged to play, the wounded monster being able to drag the boat several miles' distance, keeping up its pace for three or four hours. The fish was ultimately to all appearances tired out and the men began to haul him up in order to lash him to the gunwale of their craft.

A second harpoon was driven into him in order that he might be more securely lashed, when, with a sudden effort, he snapped the barb of the spear, got his head free, and dashed off at such a rate of speed that the coil of rope on which he pulled went more than two inches into the gunwale of the boat. Then ensued the catastrophe. The rope got entangled round the legs of one of the fishermen who was paying it out, and he was whipped overboard in a second. His companions rushing over to save him, the boat was upset and nine men were thrown into the water. Of these, five were drowned; the rope, on being pulled in, having attached to it the body of the unfortunate man who had been caught in the coil."

—The Neptune Yacht Club, numbering 11 men, with their fine vessel the Mist, arrived here yesterday. They leave for the Vineyard today.

—A daughter of Dr. J. Marion Sims will be married at Newport, in a few weeks, to Mr. Charles Gregory, one of the family of Jersey City millionaires. [N. Y. Graphic.

—The money market is getting easier; there have been two instances today of persons finding large sums floating round loose on the sidewalk.

—A dog with an abundance of tin ware attached to his tail was the cause of a good deal of merriment as he ran at lightning speed on Thames street yesterday.

—The hotel keepers state that they are doing as well at the present time as at the corresponding time last season. A large number of guests are expected tomorrow morning.

—The music of the American Band which passing the Atlantic House this morning frightened the horses of W. T. Bowler, which were attached to a carriage containing two ladies. They started so suddenly as to wrench the pole from its fastening. The carriage was also otherwise damaged.

—The presumption is that when a boy has occasion to leave town he is obliged to stand somewhere outside the depot and take the train on the fly, because there is a notice at the station, "No boys allowed in the depot." But if the sign means "No boys about the depot," we beg leave to say that it is a barefaced fraud, for in that depot are to be found at times some of the noisiest boys in town, a few of whom come down for the express purpose of carrying trunks and several of whom don't.

MASONIC. St. Elmo Commandery Knights Templar of Meriden, Ct., accompanied by the American Band of Providence, arrived here yesterday at four o'clock on the steamer River Belle. They were met and escorted to the Ocean House by Washington Commandery of this city, H. J. Hudson, E. C. They left at noon today, returning by the Wickford route.

RUNAWAY. Late yesterday afternoon, a horse attached to a milkwagon, owned by Mr. Durfee, on the Hunter place, and driven by his little daughter, started to run while the girl was serving a customer on the Hill and ran down Mill street very violently, until near the corner of Spring street, where he fell to the ground. Before he was secured he rose to his feet and again started on his "rampage," continuing till he reached the corner of Ferry Wharf, when he was again dashed violently to the ground. In view of the vigor of the exploit and the number of people and vehicles in the street it was singular that no damage was done save a few cuts upon the horse.

The milk was spilt.

What is going to be done at Providence? It is reported that the barque Galatea from Sicily, arrived at Newport on a recent morning bound for Providence, with a cargo of brimstone. Providence did not have any Fourth of July, and now this looks like a just retribution. [Transcript.

A lady in Providence was accosted a few evenings ago by a stranger who handed her a purse containing a sum of money which he had stolen from her three years before. He simply remarked in giving it back, "I took it. I was in bad company and was tempted; but I never meant to keep it."

THE FAY ALUMNI.

The Election of Officers—An Appreciated Banquet—Witty Speeches—The Dazy Mance.

One of the most delightful of affairs of this or any other season occurred yesterday at George Rice's. It was the reunion of the past members of Mr. Henry H. Fay's school. The affair was a complete success, and reflects great credit on all who were responsible for its management. Aside from the thorough good feeling that may always be expected at such a time, the considerable number who were present, about thirty-six, the excellence of the dinner, and the wit and eloquence exhibited in the post prandial speeches all conspired to make the occasion one of the rarest interest.

Before dinner the following officers were elected:

President, Rev. C. A. Holbrook of Brighton, Mass.

Vice President, Henry C. Tinker of New York.

Secretary and Treasurer, T. M. Seabury 2nd., of Newport.

Executive Committee, George Simes, J. Henry Stedman, R. C. Hooper, Fletcher U. Harper, Francis Lawton, Jr., Albert K. Sherman, Stephen Gould, John C. Seabury, S. B. Forsyth and Robert Grosvenor.

Floor Committee, Fred Durant, Harry Harper, E. Clarance Hovey, William J. Cozzens and Melville Bull.

Reception Committee, William T. Bull, M. D., Warren Weston and Mark Hollingsworth.

The dinner was served at four o'clock, and was gotten up in Mr. Rice's best style. It is hardly worth while to give the bill of fare because

"It is not our style
To go gin the grain
By discussing fat pigeons
And sparkling champagne,"

before those who weren't there, and had neither.

All did about equal justice to the eatables: but if the present members of the schools imbibe learning with the same audacity with which they did cham-pagne yesterday, it will soon be a wonder how such small heads can carry all they know.

After the dinner had been eaten and some cigars had been smoked, and the bibulous infants had been informed that there was nothing more in their bottles for them, the company gathered around the head of the table, where sat Mr. Fletcher A. Harper, the president pro tem. and Mr. Frank Lawton, toastmaster, to hear the speeches.

One of the waiters brought in a large and elegant jeweler's case, and Mr. Harper opened it and disclosed an elegant massive silver fruit dish which he presented to Mr. Fay in behalf of the assembled gentlemen. Mr. Fay said that after an experience of twenty-five years in not exhibiting surprise it would not be strange if he manifested none then. But he was taken completely by storm. A good dinner and good speeches were all he had expected. But on the present occasion he couldn't do justice to his feelings without some preparation. He would say to all that they had always had his regards and now they had his thanks. More he could not say.

Mr. Fay was called out at the close of his speech and soon reentered with one of his former pupils. He announced to the audience that in return for what they had done to him he would immediately put a head on them, and he presented to them Mr. Fred. Head of the Sheffield Scientific School.

Mr. Harper addressed the Alumni briefly of the pleasure he felt in being present, and spoke highly of the efforts made by Messrs. Cozzens, Ward and others to organize the association. There are many ladies, he said, who would be glad to get members of this association for husbands.

Mr. Fay said that a great source of anxiety to him for the past twenty years had been these same young ladies. Mr. Harper then introduced the toastmaster, Mr. Frank Lawton, who said if he were to preach a sermon he would take for his text the words "Oh be joyful!" It was very delightful to be in Newport and meet the young ladies of this city. In behalf of the bachelors he congratulated those who had married. Domestic life is the basis of all success. The speaker indulged in several humorous reminiscences. He thought the speaking ought to be good, because friends were around, ladies waiting, and the dinner for which Mr. Rice should be thanked, afforded inspiration.

The first toast was "The Ladies," and Mr. Charles P. Ward was requested to respond. Mr. Ward confessed that since the last annual banquet he had committed matrimony in the first degree, and his remarks indicated that he was very profoundly and seriously married. For the encouragement of the bachelors he said that marriage was no such very serious thing as is sometimes supposed. For those who are prepared for it, marriage is a good and precious thing; one that all honest Christian men should do if they can. He considered some pecuniary foundation essential to matrimony, but was severe on those who marry for good looks or stylish clothes.

He spoke eulogistically of the female relatives of soldiers in our late war, and believed that if their devotion and heroism were known and appreciated the sex would be accorded higher social position and that they would be allowed to vote however, because he believed in the domestic sphere theory and finally he said that in matrimony is the only proper way to live, when one can enter into it properly and according to the dictates of good sense. Mr. Ward closed with a poem which we print elsewhere, and he took his chair amid the most tumultuous applause.

Mr. J. C. Seabury was asked to respond to the sentiment "Our old schoolhouses."

He spoke of the pleasant memories that cluster about the localities where one had received school. He referred to the Mill street school house, Aquidneck Hall, and the new school house. On one occasion he and some others selected seats in the extreme rear of the hall, almost out of sight of Mr. Fay, but in a few days the teacher had them back on the front seats. He presumed it was because Mr. Fay liked their society. He alluded to the extra study on Saturday, all without extra charge, as Mr. Fay interpolated.

He hoped all would be present at the next reunion. He closed with appropriate reference to the deceased companions, Messrs. Blake, Tompkins and others.

The association then sang "Auld Lang Syne."

The toastmaster said he had a deep interest in the law and would call on to respond to that sentiment a gentleman who was already making his mark in the profession,—Mr. Austin G. Fox.

Mr. Fox said he didn't know why it should be said that he was making his mark. Was it supposed that he couldn't write?

Mr. Fox said, "You always did right."

Mr. Fox said the poet had declared that the birds' songs were loud and long, and he presumed that the foxes' songs were soft and low. Some one suggested that the foxes at least had long tails. Mr. Fox assented, but said that they were not interesting to tell. Mr. Fox spoke for several minutes in a very humorous vein but his speech was so full of "quips and cranks and wanton wiles" that it was unreportable.

The toastmaster said that great credit was due to Mr. Will. J. Cozzens for the inception and maintenance of this association, and he called on Mr. Cozzens to speak of the Alumni.

Mr. Cozzens said it was understood at the outset that he was to do the outside work and be excused from all speaking.

Mr. Fay was called on to respond to the toast. He said that he felt a little like a contortionist in a circus. He scarcely knew where he was, or what he was doing. He hardly knew whether he was man or boy. The toast was hardly one that he should be asked to respond to. It is not proper to ask a physician to speak of his patients.

It wouldn't do to ask him if so and so had the diabetis or only the gout, or if his wife had anything the matter with her or not. Did anyone wish him to tell all he knew of the president's protem, while he was in Newport? Would it not be revealing profound secrets, if he told all he knew about the alumni, it would bring absolute disgrace on some of the members. He couldn't speak of the school any more than he could speak of the circulation of his blood. It was a part of his system.

But it is delightful to look back twenty years, and think that all the disagreeable things have vanished, and been forgotten. In the schools that he attended the relation of the teacher and pupil were like those of master and slave. But his school started on the principle of making every boy into a man, and treating him as a gentleman. But for this feeling he had about school teaching he should have been condemned to study law. The principles of government he had adopted were not original with him, he had learned them of Thomas Jefferson. So far in his school they had proved successful. All his boys would always be trusted as men, and the relations of teacher to pupil will always be those of friends.

When teachers like boys the boys like them. He highly appreciated the elegant present he had received and accepted it as a token that he was one of those teachers whose boys liked him. He asked for no higher testimonial than this. He closed with encomiums on Lieut. Sherwood, Frank Russell, and others who have passed away.

Under the leadership of Mr. Robert Grosvenor the association joined in singing "Jolly Good Fellows," "Landlord fill the flowing bowl, and other similar hymns. "Bingo" was performed with a castanet accompaniment on the fingers of Mr. Fox.

The toastmaster referred in very complimentary terms to Mr. J. O. Chaulks and others with whom they had been connected, and called on Mr. Leslie to speak of the feelings between teachers and pupils.

Mr. Leslie said that he had found no way so sure or successful in governing pupils as to have sympathy with them. Those who were dissatisfied with teaching were those who really cared nothing for their boys, and though they were men of an usual ability they were failures so far as teaching went. He believed the position of teacher is second to none, not even to the clergy, for he who has charge of the youth of the country has more influence than he who has charge of their spiritual interests after they have matured.

The toast master spoke highly of the resident alumni, and recounted in a humorous manner some of the incidents of his childhood in this city. Mr. Ferdinand Finkenstaedt responded to the toast, "Newport Men."

Mr. Grosvenor then gave a comic song, after which the landlord was again unanimously requested to fill the flowing bowl.

The Press was responded to by Mr. E. B. Taber of the New York Tribune, who drew a parallel between the newspaper of to day and the different departments of history.

The Newport News was very briefly responded to by Mr. Fred P. Powers.

Mr. Fred. Head spoke eloquently of the prominence and value of science. The country needs intelligent scientific labor to develop its resources. Science enters into everything, into war as well as peace. He closed with some reminiscences of school days.

The association then sang "Vive l'Amour," after which Mr. C. E. Harvey responded to the toast, "The merchants."

Mr. T. M. Seabury, 2nd., spoke briefly of the Newport men and the interests of the Alumni Association.

Mr. Mark Hollingsworth responded to the toast of Amherst College, and promised that her crew should win at Springfield this summer. Lewis Kelley, the youngest boy in school, was put on the table and expressed himself as anxious to become a member of the association some time. Mr. R. B. Porter was called on to speak of the present members. He said he was never taught to declaim, and therefore he claimed that it could not be effected that he should be more clamorous.

The association then announced that they were all Jolly Good Fellows, and adjourned that so said they all of them, and at a quarter to nine they adjourned to meet the ladies.

The dance in the evening was an eminent success. The Fort band furnished the music, and twenty couples participated in the intoxicating pleasures of the dance for two hours following half past nine. We cannot describe the charming ladies, nor give the names of those present further than to say that a son of Admiral Porter was among the number. The floor managers were W. J. Cozzens, Frank Lawton, J. Peckham, Laughton Blood, T. M. Seabury, and Harry Tinken.

THE REUNION

A Poem read by Mr. Charles P. Ward of New York at the Dinner of the Alumni Association of Mr Fay's School, July 11th, 1873.

Be ye glad, or be ye sad
Come and list my simple song;
For poets' dreams, though strange it seems,
Can help the weary heart along.
Oh we are a band of brothers
On the battle field of life;
And swift hand in hand together,
We march onward to the strife.
Oh we are a band of brothers
With brave, loyal hearts and true
And shed our blessings over all
Like the heroes grateful dew

Another year, friends. What changes,
What great events have passed
Since on the day we celebrate
We here assembled last.
Sweet is the hour, that brings us here,
Where all are glad to meet us;
Where hands are striving as we come
To be the first to meet us,
When the world hath spent its frowns and wrath
And care been sorely pressing;
'Tis sweet to turn from our roving path,
And find a fireside blessing.
Oh joyfully dear is the homeward track
If we are sure of a welcome back.

Comrades and friends, mysterious power
Is centered in this sacred hour;
Forming a tie no force can part,
Binding us closely, heart to heart;
Shoulder to shoulder here we stand,
Thought linked to thought, hand clasped in hand;
So bring us up, with [illegible],
The memories of by gone years,
With smiles for pleasant jokes and plays
Which gladdened us in boyhood days;
With tears, as thought of some still dear,
The youthful friends no longer here.

Flight of time we'll not deplore,
For we all are "boys" once more;
Oldest or youngest, we'll not say;
No one shall tell this today;
Though one's hair were white as snow,
It's only powder for a show;
These aged looks cannot deceive,
You playfully but make believe;
Though perfectly you play your part,
One sees how young you are at heart;
This day we all have found in truth,
The fountain which renews our youth.

Oh it's not a home in the mansions of pride,
Where marble shines out in the pillars and walls;
Though the roof be of gold it is brilliantly cold,
And joy may not be found in its torch lighted halls:
But seek for a bosom all honest and true,
Where love, once awakened will never depart;
Turn, turn to that breast like the dove to its nest;
And you'll find there's no home like a home in the heart.

Oh link but one spirit that's warmly sincere,
That will heighten your pleasure and solace your care;
Find a soul you may trust as the kind and the just
And be sure the wild world holds no treasure so rare.
Then the frowns of misfortune may shadow our lot,
The check searing tear drops of sorrow may start,
But a star never dim, sheds a halo for him
Who can turn for repose to a home in the heart.

We may have seen some loved ones pass
To the land of hallowed rest;
We may miss the glow of an honest brow
And the warmth of a friendly heart;
But if we missed them while on earth
With hearts all true and kind;
Will their spirits blame the sinless mirth
Of those true hearts left behind?
No, no—it were not well nor wise
To mourn with endless pain
There's a better world beyond the skies,
Where the good shall meet again.

Come, let us part with lightsome heart,
Nor breathe one chiding sigh;
To think that wings of rainbow plume
So soon should learn to fly.
We scarcely like the chimes to strike
That tell of pleasure's flight;
But friendship's chain, when severed thus—
Is sure to reunite.
Then why not we as merry be,
Though this song be the last,
Believing other hours will come
As bright as those just past.

The wild bird's song is loud and long,
But the sweetest and the best
Is whistled as he leaves the bough,
To seek his lonely nest.
The sun's rich beam shines through the day
But flashes deeper still
While darting forth his farewell ray
Behind the western hill.
Then why not we as merry be
In this our parting strain;
For like the bird and sun we'll come
With joy and warmth again.

The moments fled, like violets dead,
Shall never lose their power;
For grateful perfume ever marks
The memory's withered flower.
The sailor's lay in peaceful bay,
With gladsome mirth rings out;
But when the heavy anchor's weighed,
He gives a blithe a shout.
Then why not we as merry be,
In this our parting strain;
And trust, as gallant sailors do,
To make the port again.

Suggestions for Summer.

It is of great importance that the system should be in a vigorous condition when the hot weather commences. The effects of a high temperature upon an enfeebled frame are always more or less disastrous. The loss of substance and the declension of nervous power, occasioned by excessive heat, can only to compensated by the active, healthful, and regular exercise of all the bodily functions by which the waste of nature is replenished and the vital energies renewed. The great utility of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a means of tonic invigorating and regulating the organs of the body, is universally acknowledged. As a [illegible] [illegible], a promoter of the digestion, [illegible], and relieves flatulency; as an alterative and mild cathartic it regulates the liver and the bowels; as an [illegible] it promotes tranquil sleep; as a wholesome [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] it purifies the vital streams. The value of such a specific to the weak or debilitated is beyond all estimate. To invalids, oppressed down by the sultry heat of midsummer, it is refreshing and vitalizing as the cool night dew is to the sun scorched flowers. Composed of vegetable elements, with a basis of pure diffusive stimulant, it is safe and palatable as well as wholesome. It is pure and [illegible], and wherever the natural conditions are conducive to endemic disease, it is considered the best safeguard against malarious infection, and the [illegible] remedy for intermittent and remittent fevers.

For Loss of Appetite, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Depression of Spirits and General Debility, in their various forms, [illegible] CALISAYA made by CASWELL, HAZARD & Co., New York, and sold by all druggists, is the best tonic. [illegible] It is taken during the season it prevents fever and ague and other intermittent fevers. jy8-1w

Thousands have been changed by the use of the Peruvian Syrup (a protoxide of Iron) from weak, sickly, suffering creatures, to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial. For Dyspepsia and Debility it is specific.

PIMPLES AND HUMORS ON THE FACE.—In this condition of the skin, the VEGETINE is the great remedy, as it acts directly upon the cause. It cleanses and purifies the blood, thereby causing humors of all kinds to disappear.

SATURDAY, JULY 12, 1873.

GENERAL NEWS.

BY TELEGRAPH.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 11.—Another feature of the salary increase bill has been brought out by a decision of the Attorney-General, who has given the opinion that the increase of pay of 15 per cent. given to the employes of the Senate and House ended with the forty-second Congress, and that those who continue during the recess cannot draw the advance compensation after the fourth of March last. Judges and Cabinet officers and others, not members of Congress, whose salaries were increased, will not receive their first month's pay at the new rate until the close of this month.

At that time the members of the next House will have drawn for five months at their new rates, or for $3125 each. For the same time the employes of the Senate and House who are retained through the summer drop the fifteen per cent., and go back to their old rates of pay.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WORCESTER, Mass., July 11.—Leominster suffered last night from the most extensive fire which has taken place in that town. The fire broke out at a quarter past eleven, apparently in the kitchen of Charles T. Walder's restaurant, in Burditt's block, opposite Monument square, where there is a line of buildings close together. The building was occupied by Wilder, except one store by George W. Foster, boots and shoes, who saved most of his stock and fixtures. The flames spread to the stable of the Leominster House in the rear, and to the hotel itself, and to the extensive manufactory of the Arlington Piano Company on the east. Here nearly two hundred pianos, finished and unfinished, were destroyed.

The Leominster House estate, loss $15,000; insured in Providence, Springfield and New York companies for $8600. The Arlington Piano Company, $55,000; insured in Philadelphia and New York companies for $16,000. George L. Jones, stove shop and barn, stock, etc., loss $15,000; insured in Providence and Hartford companies for $5000. Hamilton Brown's auction room, loss $1000, fully insured in Boston and Providence companies.

There is no doubt that the fire was caused by an incendiary, who has been in active operation in that town for some months, and it is probable that a full investigation will now take place.

PORTLAND, July 11.—There is a dense fog all along the coast and it is more than likely that the steamer Falmouth from Halifax with the passengers from the wrecked steamship City of Washington will not arrive here until tomorrow afternoon, and perhaps quite late. With favorable weather and the number she has on board she would be due at about ten o'clock in the forenoon. The passengers will proceed to Boston by the steamer Montreal, which leaves here at seven o'clock tomorrow evening. Those who were cabin passengers on the City of Washington will stop at the Falmouth House during the few hours they may be in this city. The others will be fed at other places and cared for by the steamship authorities.

A WRITING MACHINE.—A writing machine is exhibited in Philadelphia. It is the invention of Mr. Emmett Dewsmore. The machine is, with its stand, about the size of a small sewing machine, and consists of a keyboard with three rows of keys, each of which is marked with a letter or number and connected with a long wire hammer, similar in action to those of a pianoforte, but bearing at the striking end, instead of the usual hard covered leather hammer, the metal die bearing the same letter or figure as that on the key. These hammers are ranged in a circle, so disposed that each hammer when thrown up by the action of its key strikes upon the same spot on a wooden cylinder, round which is rolled the paper to be written upon. Underneath this paper is a piece of ordinary carbonized paper, so that when the die on the hammer strikes upon it, the white paper is at once marked with whatever letter or figure may be upon the die. As the key which has been struck rises on being relieved from the pressure upon it, its action loosens a catch by which the wooden cylinder has been detained in its place, and the cylinder, acted upon by a coiled spring at one end, moves on a small space, so as to expose a fresh surface for the impact of the next die, which, on its key being struck, rises as before, and marks the paper with a fresh letter or figure immediately following the first. In this way each word is spelled, the striking of a light wooden bar which runs along the front of the key board sufficing, at the end of each word, to move the cylinder forward without making any mark upon the paper, thus forming the spaces between the words. There are, of course, keys carrying the various notes of interrogation, &c., and it will readily be seen that by this simple arrangement a sentence may be printed off even much more rapidly than it can be written, each letter requiring, instead of the complicated, though unconscious, process of formation by a pen or pencil, only the single rap with the finger upon the key.

They propose to raise, at Madison, Wis., before the coming of our National Centennial, a monument to the discoverer of America, and his name is not Christopher Columbus. He is said to have visited those shores nearly 500 years ahead of the Genoese navigator. Leif Erikson, otherwise called the son of Erik the Red, a Norwegian, is declared by certain Icelandic manuscripts, which have been examined by trustworthy scholars, to have been the European who really discovered America. In the year 1000 Erikson landed on the coast of New England, and spent the winter of that year at or near Fall River, Mass. At this place, seven years after, Thornson Karlseyne and his party left the celebrated "Dighton Writing Rock" inscription. There were several expeditions after this, extending to 1347, when a plague broke out in Norway, which cut off the people to such a fearful extent that all great enterprises were given up. It is rather curious that Columbus was in Iceland in 1477, and might have heard enough to send him forth on his voyages of discovery. As historic experts of late have been busy demolishing old legends, it is very gratifying to see new ones brought to light.

SEASONINGS.

Overcoats and blankets are in demand at Catskill.

The first bathing accident of the season has occurred at Atlantic City.

A large number of New York and Brooklyn families are at the Neptune House, New Rochelle.

Schooley's Mountain has managed to attract all its old patrons this summer, and many new ones.

Fitznoodles at the sea-side wear white flannel suits. Others stick a bit of window-glass in the right eye.

The noble army of knife-swallowers have arrived at Long Branch, and give gratuitous exhibitions at meal time.

A band of remarkably dirty Indians (?) are importuning visitors at Niagara to purchase their willow ware.

At Stonington the fashionable promenade is on the Breakwater, a place especially adapted for quiet flirtations.

William Penn's great-great-grand-daughters are to be found nicely domiciled at Howland's, Long Branch.

Manchester, Vermont, is called one of the most substantial and aristocratic resorts in America.

Lake Mahopac has risen to the dignity of a weekly newspaper. It will chronicle all social events during the season.

Itinerant musicians have made their appearance at many of the summer resorts, and contribute to make night hideous.

Natty and gayly decorated little excursion steamers are now gliding up and down the smooth waters of Lake George.

Ladies at Cape May are searching for the famous sand diamonds. The demand, however, is greater than the supply.

The Cape May hotels are reported well filled. The "upper ten" of the Quaker City congregate at the Stockton House.

Evening parade at West Point attracts all the ladies from the hotel, and is a pretty and inspiring scene to witness.

Sportsmen are numerous about this time in the Adirondack region. There's plenty of game, but they can't find it.

Coney Island, once the resort of fashionables, is now the headquarters of thieves, blackguards, and rowdies generally.

Extensive preparations for the races are being made at Saratoga. The sport will be inaugurated on Thursday, the 24th.

Many New York families are summering among the grand old Berkshire Hills, gaining health and strength day by day.

Several Cuban families are at Saratoga. The ladies are conspicuous for their great beauty and magnificent toilettes.

Everybody talks horse at Long Branch. It is Bowling and Springbok, Springbok and Bowling, morning, noon, and night.

Washington's headquarters at Newburg on-Hudson is one of the great sights there. It is a curious old place, well worth a visit.

The most quiet watering place in the country, and the least expensive, is the island of Nantucket. People go there to bathe in the surf, to wear their old clothes, to see the Quakers, to get up clambakes, to kill sand flies, to learn how to make chowder, and to study unnatural history. Agassiz used to go there every year, and, at one time, proposed to establish some sort of a school the inhabitants would talk about was a school of whales.

Sheriff's Sale.

Newport, sc. STATE OF RHODE ISLAND, &c.

SHERIFF'S OFFICE, Newport, June 21, 1873.

BY VIRTUE and in pursuance of an Execution issued out of the Clerk's Office of the Supreme Court of the State within and for the County of Newport, on the first day of April, A. D., 1873, upon a judgment of said Court rendered on the 22d day of March, A. D., 1873, in favor of Jane S. Pearce of Little Compton, in the county of Newport and State aforesaid and against Elijah Pearce of the same Little Compton, for the sum of $1,392.50 debt and costs, whereof execution remains to be done, I did, on the 18th day of April, A. D., 1873, at fifty-five minutes past nine o'clock, A. M., levy the said execution upon all the right, title and interest, which Elijah Pearce the aforesaid defendant, had, at the time of said levy, in and to the following described premises, to wit:—A certain parcel of land with all the buildings and improvements thereupon situated in said town of Little Compton in said county and bounded Northerly on lands of Charles F. Briggs, Jane E. Pearce, and Allen E. Devol; Westerly, partly on lands of James Pearce, and partly on lands of Samuel G. Pearce; Southerly on land of James Pearce and land of heirs of Stephen Simmons and partly on land of John Devol; Easterly on the town highway so called and lands of said John Devol or however otherwise the same may be bounded, subject to the dower to be recovered, if any, in a suit in equity against the said Elijah Pearce brought by John E. Pearce, Luther W. Pearce, Emma L. Pearce and Edward S. Pearce, which suit is now pending in the Supreme Court of said State within and for the County of Newport, and

NOTICE is hereby given that I will sell the said attached estate at a public auction to be held on the said attached and described premises on Saturday the 12th day of July, A. D., 1873, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, for the satisfaction of said execution, debt, interest, costs, my own fees and all contingent expenses if sufficient, unless the same shall be sooner satisfied.

GEO. MANCHESTER, Sheriff.

ADJOURNMENT.

Newport, sc. Newport, July 12, 1873.

The above sale is hereby adjourned to Monday the twenty-first day of July, A. D. 1873, at 12 o'clock, M., on the aforesaid premises, in consequence of an order from the Supreme Court restraining said sale, until further notice. GEO. MANCHESTER,

James H. Clarke's Column.

James H. Clarke,

Formerly of Clarke, Titus & Co.,

Would respectfully inform his friends and the public that he has taken the south part of Cottrell Block, next south of the Post Office, where it is his intention to keep a full assortment of

House Furnishing

GOODS,

OF SUPERIOR QUALITY,

At reasonable prices. I have on hand and am receiving daily

Fine French China,

White and decorated.

Beautiful China Toilet Sets,

Decorated in various styles.

French, German & American Glass Ware.

A full assortment of first quality English White Stone Ware. The greatest variety of styles of

SILVER PLATED WARE

in the city, comprising

Tea Sets,
Ice Pitchers,
Castors,
Butter Dishes,
Syrup Cups,
Pie & Fish Knives,
Napkin Rings,
Cake & Fruit Baskets,
Spoons,
Forks,
Knives,

In short, all articles in the line of Plated Ware.

Hand, Stand, and Bracket Lamps!

Various Styles.

I shall keep constantly on hand

STOVES, FURNACES, RANGES,

Of the most approved patterns, including Magee's celebrated Ranges, and also the new Plate Iron Hot Air Furnace, which is conceded by all impartial judges, to be superior to any yet invented, (when there is a better, I shall endeavor to procure it). It is free from the most serious objections which attach to other furnaces. It being utterly impossible for any gases to pass through the castings. To those contemplating having a new furnace, this is a most important consideration, as there are a great many troubled with gas in the city, from impure and poorly set furnaces. I have also a full line of Cutlery of English & American Manufacture.

Wooden and Tin Ware,

Japan Ware,

Baskets, Brooms,

Mats, Wringers,

Sad Irons,

And all articles in Laundry or House furnishing line.

I shall be pleased to see any or all of my old customers and any quantity of new ones at my new place of business and will assure them of a hearty desire to please them in every particular.

AGENTS WANTED!

Cast Adrift! Cast Adrift!

A companion to the famous "Three Years in a Man-Trap" and "Ten Nights in a Bar-Room," by T. S. Arthur. The latest and greatest book of this celebrated author—splendidly illustrated, elegantly bound, and will sell at sight by thousands. Is highly indorsed by the most prominent people and papers of the country. A story of crime and outrage in our midst which will appal the stoutest heart. Will do more for the cause of temperance and morality than the law. Agents who have sold "Man-Trap" cannot fail to sell double the number of this book. A Life of the Author, with steel portrait, presented to every subscriber. Descriptive circulars and terms sent free on application to GEO. MACLEAN, Publisher, 3 School St., Boston, Mass. je26-4w

OCEAN'S STORY:

OR TRIUMPHS OF THIRTY CENTURIES; By F. B. Goodrich (son of "Peter Parley") and E. Howland. A work of great historical research recounting in truly graphic style the wonderful growth of navigation, and history of discovery since the flood; is replete with incidents, thrilling adventures, battles, shipwrecks, mutinies, piracies, &c. Describes how from the first tiny bark, when ocean was the dark realm of terrors, sails now whiten every sea, lightning flashes tidings from shore to shore; and men bring up wonders from deep waters, with many other matters of lively interest, which go to make up one of the most VALUABLE, FASCINATING and REMARKABLE productions of the age. Over 200 spirited illustrations. Agents Wanted. For circulars and terms address, HUBBARD BROS., Publishers, Boston, Mass. je26-4w
